NoveList

College and university faculty are discovering the value of fiction in the study of humanities and social sciences. Fiction studies has once again become a focal point in research agendas of educators like Stanley Fish, Jane Tompkins, and Elizabeth Long, as they delve into what fiction titles tell us about literature, society and ourselves. To help further the informed study of fiction, we offer NoveList, an electronic resource dedicated to the discovery of popular fiction.

Besides being of great value to fiction researchers, NoveList's coverage of young adult and children's literature will serve to support your institution's teacher education programs.

Robust Database of Fiction Titles

NoveList gives you both the flexibility and power you need to address even your most discriminating readers' questions. Use the product's "Find a Favorite Author" feature to locate a list of John Grisham's titles, and then use one of these titles to find more than 200 other legal thrillers for your John Grisham fans with the Find Similar Books feature. With the "Describe a Plot" search, you can use keywords to search the product's title records and full-text reviews for "fast-paced" books or books that make good "read aloud" titles for a day-care center. And in response to customer requests, NoveList's "Find a Series Name" search now displays complete lists of series titles in reading order.

Results lists in NoveList can be sorted multiple ways, including by author, title, publication year, relevance and popularity.

Additional Customized Content

Author Read-alikes: NoveList has read-alike lists like no other read-alikes you have seen! In addition to suggesting additional authors and titles, our experts give a brief description of the author's writing style and the appeal factors that keep their fans coming back for more. Read-alikes for several new authors are added monthly and can be accessed at the "For Readers" tab.

Annotated Bibliographies and Articles: Developed exclusively for NoveList by teachers and librarians, these articles provide creative ways to use fiction in the classroom while ensuring your curricular goals are met. These bibliographies offer thematic avenues for encouraging your students to interact with books (e.g., character education, literature around the world).

Additional customized content includes Book Discussion Guides, BookTalks and much more.

Link to Your Catalog

You can now link NoveList to your catalog so that when library users find books in NoveList, they can check your catalog to see whether your library owns them. Be sure to ask about our linking capabilities when you contact us for your free trial of the product.

If you are looking for a way to bring your collection and your institution's fiction readers together, NoveList is your solution. With the product's comprehensive database and customized content, NoveList is the best way you have to ensure that your library's readers' advisory services thrive.
