Looking for Student Mental Health Ambassadors

Please encourage Solano students who might be interested in the Student Wellness Ambassador Program to apply online. The program is a component of the California Community Colleges Student Mental Health Program www.cccstudentmentalhealth.org. It will have 15 students who will serve as Student Wellness Ambassadors at each California Community College, including SCC. Ambassadors will help their peers' access services, conduct outreach, disseminate mental health materials, and help decrease the stigma around mental health and wellness.

Those who are accepted to the program will:

- be trained as a Student Wellness Ambassador through a combination of in-person and online trainings;
- be connected with a faculty advisor on their campus;
- complete a series of milestone goals around peer-outreach on campus, share mental health and wellness materials, plan a health and wellness event or activity, work with a faculty advisor, participate in monthly calls with fellow Student Ambassadors;
- each Ambassador will receive a $750 stipend for their service, and an all-expense paid trip to Sacramento to participate in a mandatory 2-day training on November 8-9, 2018.

Half time at women soccer alumni game. Great turn out and impressive testimonies of alumni as of the impact of community college in their lives and careers

Cardinal has seen hundreds of student-athletes come and go over the years as a fixture of the program. But as he enters his 17th year leading the program and fifth year with co-head coach Sissi do Amor, Cardinal has made it a point of engaging the program's fruitful history with its imminent future.
